FLORIDA SHERIFFS ASSOCIATION
LAW ENFORCEMENT MEMORIAL

Dedication

see page 12

From the desk of . . .

Gary Perkins, Executive Director
Florida Sheriffs Association

The mood around the Sheriffs Association this fall can best be described as a combination of somber moments and reflection.

Several events have led to this. During the summer, one of our Sheriffs lost his 19-year-old son in an automobile accident. Christopher Fugate, son of Desoto County Sheriff and Mrs. Johnny Fugate, was a new student at Florida State University – which made it an especially difficult loss.

Just a few weeks later, Union County Deputy Renee Azure was killed in the line of duty. Deputy Azure was en route to a burglary call and was involved in an automobile accident. She was pregnant, which made it an even greater tragedy for her family members and brothers and sisters in law enforcement.

I attended both funerals, and both were honored by crowds of supporters, especially those in law enforcement.

Sheriffs were at the side of both Desoto County Sheriff Johnny Fugate and Union County Sheriff Jerry Whitehead. They came with resources, too, which proved the solidarity among those who wear the Sheriff's Star.

At both funerals, the range of law-enforcement officers and other public-safety personnel was amazing – state law enforcement officers, sheriff's deputies, police officers, and EMS personnel. It just shows you how broad the family circle is. When one of us goes down, we all feel the loss.

We don't always realize how close knit that family circle is until we witness an unfortunate occasion like this. But there's no doubt in my mind, the ties are so strong, there's virtually nothing we wouldn't do for each other.

That law-enforcement brotherhood and recognition of the "ultimate" sacrifice each officer is willing to make every day, was also demonstrated in our Law Enforcement Memorial dedication, which took place September 18, behind the FSA offices in Tallahassee.

You probably recall reading about this dedication – as it's been a long-term project. It was the passion of my predecessor, Buddy Phillips, who thankfully continued to work on the project even after retirement.

Just watching Buddy as he organized the memorial dedication, in spite of numerous medical setbacks, was an incredible experience. This was clearly an act of love, not labor, and it once again demonstrated Buddy's ability to put others before himself.

We wanted to offer you a glimpse of that dedication – so you, too, could witness the closeness among the law-enforcement ranks. We hope you enjoy the photo essay in this issue.

We also wanted to dedicate space in this magazine to thank ALL of those who supported this effort. Whether you gave $10 or hundreds, we included your name in our Memorial donor list in the back of this magazine.

Many thanks to those of you who took the time to write or call following our last cover story about new laws and automobile-related practices. It was obvious we hit a sore point – as you voiced your opinions loud and clear. Find out more on our Letters to the Editor page.

I sign off extending an invitation for you to visit the Florida Sheriffs Association Law Enforcement Memorial wall. It's sheltered under the canopy of stately oaks, a fitting tribute to those who paid the "ultimate" sacrifice.

We hope to see you soon.

Cycle of Violence Leads to Child Abuse

By: Broward County Sheriff
Ken Jenne

There was a time when our society did not treat child abuse or domestic violence as crimes — a time when unexplained bruises and broken bones were spoken of in whispers, and kicking the family pet was not spoken of at all.

We now know that the abuse of one's children, intimate partners, elderly parents and other vulnerable beings is not just a "family problem." It is one segment of a broader cycle that perpetuates violence throughout our communities. Greater public awareness of this cycle has led our nation into a new era of prevention and protection for victims.

However, there is still an element of the cycle that needs greater recognition and application if we are to be truly effective at ending these patterns, and that is the undeniable link between animal cruelty and human violence.

Any survivor of domestic violence can attest to how the cycle of abuse affects everyone in the home. Abusers do not distinguish between victims — often redirecting their anger from an intimate partner to the children to the family pet, with no particular order to his or her acts of rage. Furthermore, battered victims — adults and children — may release anger and frustration on their children, siblings, animals and others in a violent manner.

Several studies over the past two decades have documented the correlation between cruelty to animals and human violence. In one study of New Jersey families receiving assistance from the state Division of Youth and Family Services because of physical abuse occurring in their households, 88 percent reported that their animals had also been abused. Two-thirds of those families said the abusive parent killed or injured an animal allegedly to discipline a child. In another study conducted by Northeastern University and the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, 60 percent of families being treated for incidents of child abuse had also abused animals.

Research has shown that many hardened criminals either witnessed animal abuse or abused animals throughout their childhood, and that cruelty to animals committed by children may predict future antisocial behavior. Many of the most high-profile serial murderers are known to have tortured and killed animals during their childhood. In fact, the Federal Bureau of Investigation now uses suspected history of animal abuse in profiling criminal behavior.

The Broward County Sheriff's Office is working to pass a state law that would require animal-control agents to report suspected child abuse, abandonment or neglect, as well as requiring child-abuse investigators to report suspicions of animal abuse or neglect. For the last few years, this proposal for "cross-reporting" has been resisted by the Florida Animal Control Association because of a perceived financial burden associated with training personnel. Nevertheless, leaders in several other states (California, Ohio, Virginia) recognize that cross-reporting is an important step toward prevention of violence, and they have proposed similar legislation. Still others have instituted prevention programs in their communities that focus on the link between animal cruelty and human violence.

Both the American Humane Association and the Humane Society of the United States have launched national campaigns to educate people that animal cruelty can be an indicator of disturbed family relationships, family violence or other potential criminal activity. Efforts to alert the professionals most likely to encounter this link have gained momentum, but they are still sluggish in many states, and non-existent in most.

It is time for lawmakers and public safety officials to recognize the undeniable link between animal cruelty and human violence, and to take steps that will protect our families and communities from these vicious, unnecessary and destructive cycles.

Protecting Our Children

By: Citrus County Sheriff Jeffrey J. Dawsy

If you've ever talked with me, even for just a few minutes, or heard me speak publicly, you know without question my unconditional commitment to youth.

You can believe me when I say that young people are our No. 1 resource and deserving of our utmost attention and interest. In fact, as evidenced by our Explorer Post, our Citizens' Academy high-school class, the FOCUS (Filtering Out Crime United with Students) and School Resource Officer (SRO) programs, this agency is dedicated to encouraging, reinforcing and protecting the county's youngest citizens. I'm especially proud of two new programs we've set in motion with young people in mind.

In recent years, computer technology has swept the planet and brought with it a new age of dangers and hazards for today's youth. And while we know organized events and outdoor activities abound in most communities throughout the state, many young people still perceive there's nothing to do. As a result, they often turn to computers for diversion and entertainment.

Michael Baute, a detective in our Crimes Against Children Unit, has researched, produced and presented both a children's and parent's program focusing on cybersafety, or how to keep children safe online. Co-sponsored by the sheriff's office and the National Center for Missing & Exploited Children, the presentation combines helpful hints and alarming facts concerning child safety on the Internet.

For instance, did you know there's been a 680 percent increase in computer-related crimes over the past three years? And the sad fact is that less than 10 percent of all computer-related crimes are ever reported to law enforcement.

As valuable as they are, computers allow criminals a new avenue for selecting victims, through scams, fraud, identity theft and sexual exploitation. In particular, child molesters savor the anonymity provided them by the Internet, using it as a cover to become whomever they wish – young or old, male or female, friend or foe. These predators also use the World Wide Web to network with other predators, comparing notes and victim information they've acquired.

Probably most at risk are girls and older teens – especially those who routinely visit chat rooms or use instant messaging, where the majority of sexual exploitation cases have their start. More importantly, parents should never underestimate their children's savvy when it comes to surfing the net. (Consider that the average age of a computer hacker is 13)

Detective Baute maintains that it is crucial to get his cybersafety message out to children before they reach 10 years of age. Two scripts used in the children's presentation target third-graders first, then reinforce the message with middle-school students.

Parents are advised to be especially wary of their children's excessive online use, unsupervised time spent in chat rooms, downloading of graphic files, receiving phone calls or gifts from strangers or arranging face-to-face meetings with those they've met on the Internet.

Detective Baute's research shows that 50 percent of 12-to 15 year-olds (and 75 percent of 16 year-olds) surf the net alone, with no adult supervision.

He advises children never to post their picture or other personal information, such as their name, address, telephone number, school or hobbies for anyone other than family or friends to see. He encourages parents to have at least a basic knowledge of computers and their capabilities; to keep home computers out of children's bedrooms and in common areas such as kitchens or dens; to be aware of other computers they may have access to such as (those in libraries or friends' homes); and activate chat logs, filters and other monitoring/screening devices.

In addition, parents may also want to consider restricting youngsters to web browsers designed specifically for children (such as the one called www.surfmonkey.com) and kid oriented search engines (such as www.yahooligans.com). For more surfing safety tips, parents and children alike can check out these web sites and many others: www.netsmartz.org, www.getnetwise.org, and www.disney.com.

To summarize, Detective Baute likens the Internet to a great big cyber neighborhood. And just as sheriff's deputies patrol the county's communities, they also must patrol the cyber neighborhood. For his part, Detective Baute will be using his computer – or as he likes to say, his cyber patrol car – to take a more proactive approach to the time-consuming task of foiling pornography, pedophilia and sexual exploitation on the Internet. He'll continue to raise public awareness by educating children, parents, teachers and community groups about how to be safe online. And he'll continue to rely on adults and children to be his cyber neighborhood crime watch and report any inappropriate subject matter they receive on their computers so that law enforcement can take decisive action.

During the 2002-03 school year, the Citrus County Sheriff's Office is introducing Child Lures Prevention as a pilot program in three elementary schools. The two-week-long class, comprised of 10 half-hour lessons, will target third-graders and dovetail nicely with Detective Baute's cybersafety presentation and this agency's drug and alcohol resistance FOCUS program, aimed at fifth-grade students.

Endorsed by the Citrus County School District, the Child Lures school program will be taught by elementary school Resource Officers. Their goal will be to put in place a continuum of early intervention – something never before attempted by the sheriff's office. They'll instruct third-graders in Child Lures Prevention, then follow up with FOCUS in the fifth grade.

Created by investigative reporter/educator Kenneth Wooden in 1984, the Child Lures Prevention program has been continuously updated and revised to keep pace with an ever-changing world. Wooden's original research included personal interviews with more than 1,000 convicted child molesters and abductors, and the information he gathered gave him insight into not only how these criminals lured their victims, but how these same victims could have eluded their tormentors.

By giving children the tools they need to recognize and avoid potentially dangerous situations and people, we in law enforcement give them a better chance of growing up to be happy, healthy and productive adults.

Building self-esteem in our children at every opportunity is vitally important, because young people with self-confidence are less likely to be victimized and more likely to assert themselves with adults or peers who try to abuse them. By nurturing their sense of self-worth, we can instill in children an expectation to be treated with respect and dignity, and to treat others in like fashion.

STAR BRIEFS

Sheriff Lancaster to Set the Standard

Congratulations to Clay County Sheriff Scott Lancaster, who was appointed by Florida Gov. Jeb Bush to succeed Sheriff Taylor Douglas on the Criminal Justice Standards and Training Commission (CJSTC).

Sheriff Lancaster has a master's in public administration and is a graduate of the FBI Academy, the National Sheriffs' Institute and Florida Criminal Justice Executive Institute. A veteran law enforcement officer for 30 years, he's been sheriff of Clay County since 1992.

As a CJSTC commissioner, Sheriff Lancaster will help oversee the certification of law enforcement officers statewide, including the certification appeals process that accompanies disciplinary actions against officers. In addition, the sheriff and other commissioners will have input on the development of law enforcement training curriculum and requirements.

We look forward to seeing continuing professionalism, under Sheriff Lancaster's leadership.

Bulletproofing Canines

Pennies to Protect Police Dogs' 12-year-old president, Stacey Hillman, appeared on the "CBS Early Show" and raised $1,200 to purchase needed vests. Called "Something to Bark About," a write-up about the story can be found on the CBS news web site: <http://www.cbsnews.com>. Type "Hillman" in the search field.

"The Early Show's" contributor Debbye Turner called little Miss Hillman, "the hero's hero."

As you may recall from previous Sheriff's Star articles, Hillman's non-profit Pennies to Protect Police Dogs raises money to buy bulletproof vests for police dogs.

Although she has received numerous accolades, she told a national audience, "I don't do this for the awards, I do it so that the police dogs get vested."

To date, Stacey has raised more than $160,000 and vested almost 200 dogs.

Marion County SO's Inmate Work Farm: New Values

*By: Lenny Uptagraft and Angela Jewell
Public Information Officers
Marion County Sheriff's Office*

Every morning at the Marion County Jail, hundreds of inmates wake up before the crack of dawn. They shower, grab a quick breakfast and board a bus that transports them to the Sheriff's Inmate Work Farm, a 58-acre operation located just outside the city limits of Ocala. They spend their days sweating in the hot sun and working harder than they ever have in their lives, tending to the farm's vegetables and livestock.

The farm not only provides agricultural training to inmates, it also saves Marion County hundreds of thousands of dollars by utilizing the resulting crops, livestock and eggs for inmate consumption through the jail's food-service unit. As a direct result of the food products derived from the farm, the 2003 budget for food has been reduced by $326,000. "We're not doing anything that hasn't been done before," says Major Towles Bigelow, who oversees the operation of the farm. "We're just doing it a little better."

Two years ago, the sheriff's office leased the property for the farm from the Florida Department of Greenways and Trails. Before farming could begin, however, the 58-acre plot had to be transformed from a tangle of scrub brush to farm-worthy land. So an initial crew of 12 worker-inmates, supervised by Captain Mike Deen, began clearing the land the same way everything is achieved today at the farm: by hand.

"You can actually do a better job with the manpower and hand tools than you can with power equipment," Deen says. "It just takes a little longer."

Presently, the farm is tended daily by nearly 100 inmates, working in nine-hour shifts. Their labor has fenced the land, raised a barn and installed an irrigation system. Inmates plant and harvest seasonal vegetables such as squash, greens, onions, corn and cucumbers. And small herds of cattle and hogs have been added to the farm. The jail has already received the first results of the livestock operation: 4,200 pounds of sausage, processed by the Manatee County Sheriff's Office inmate meat processing plant. Plans are underway to add 4,000 chickens, which will be kept in three separate chicken houses. Properly tended, those chickens should produce enough eggs to cut the jail's $70,000 annual egg costs nearly in half.

Besides growing vegetables and raising livestock, inmates operate a horticulture business, which supplies governmental facilities throughout Marion County with landscape plants.

Inmates also receive academic instruction at the farm. Inmates transformed a portable classroom into a classic red schoolhouse, complete with bell tower, which is staffed by a full-time Community Education instructor. Agriculture and horticulture classes are taught to all worker-inmates at the farm. Inmates can also fulfill requirements for their General Equivalency Diploma (G.E.D.). These educational opportunities, as well as the entire farm experience, are all part of the "Jail To Work Initiative," a program that affords inmates the opportunity to learn job skills which will enhance their employment opportunities once released from jail.

And what do the inmates get for all of their hard work? For every month they work, nine days are subtracted from their jail sentence. But more importantly, they come away with a trade and work ethic they can use once they are released from jail — as well as the satisfaction that comes from growing something with their own hands.

"Inmates will call their families and brag about what they do here," Deen says. "We're reaching out and touching some of these guys."

Height of Hurricane Season

By: Cpl. Rick Hord
Hord Public Information Officer
Okaloosa County Sheriff's Office

A major hurricane is like World War II: a continental divide in the lives of those who survived it. Life events for them fall into two categories: "before the war" and "after the war." In the case of many Floridians who survived the state's most recent hurricanes, life events fall into two categories, too: "before Opal" and "after Opal," or "before Andrew" and "after Andrew."

"Opal" is one of 31 retired hurricane names. "Olga" has filled Opal's place on the six-year rotation list. "Erin," northwest Florida's other direct strike in that incredible 1995 hurricane season, remains an active name. It was on last year's list and will be available for re-use again in 2007.

Some lessons from north Floridians learned from Opal are worth repeating:

Not everybody should evacuate. Mobile homes, and areas vulnerable to flooding or storm surge should be evacuated. Otherwise, people in sturdy homes who aren't likely to be caught in a flood or stranded are sometimes better off to stay in place. One mile inland may be safer than 100 or even 500 miles inland. Opal killed half a dozen people in the Atlanta area, and only one in Florida.

Technology can actually be a hindrance. We've become dependant on gizmos and gadgets. When a storm disrupts power and computers, we suffer the consequences. The plethora of television channels dilute hurricane preparedness. In the days when local TV and radio ruled, almost everybody received the same information as a storm approached. Now, many people watch lots of TV and know nothing of developing tropical peril. The lesson is this: Your best source is local radio. During a hurricane, you need specific local information, and you won't get much of that from the Weather Channel and other national networks.

The Internet is a new player that should have a positive impact. In October 1995, it was many days before evacuated citizens could return home. And many of those evacuated citizens were scattered across the country. Yet, the media in Atlanta and Birmingham weren't reporting what streets in our part of Florida were passable or when the water system would be working in specific communities. For those and many other questions, the only source of answers was long-distance telephone into an area where phone lines and the humans answering them were near the breaking point. For displaced folks, in the future, the Internet web sites (including the local newspaper) will be a wonderful link home to get the information they need.

There is no magic way to temporarily increase the traffic capacity of existing roads. Florida and Alabama authorities have been working together in hopes of making any future evacuations less agonizing than the one seven years ago. But the fact remains that the roads can only handle so much traffic. That's one important reason why everybody should not try to leave — especially not all at once. Strange as it may seem, converting one southbound lane of Highway 85 to a temporary northbound lane would NOT help. In fact, it would create more problems than it would solve.

Hurricane season continues through the end of November. So please pay attention to these and other lessons from those who have been there. And be prepared.

Welcome to Florida: Don't Forget Your Hurricane Kit

If you're in Florida between the months of June and November, it's likely you'll hear warnings to prepare for hurricane season.

The state offers a helpful web site (www.floridadisaster.org) that contains all the information you need to make sure your house is hurricane-ready. The following tips can help.

A HOME SECURED

To start, make sure the seals are secure for the windows, doors and garage. Then, have the roof checked. If winds from the hurricane get into the house, it can build pressure, eventually blowing the roof off and tearing out all entrances.

A HOME WELL-STOCKED

You should also have an emergency readiness kit. At minimum, this should include water stored in an unbreakable container. Calculate about a gallon a day for each person in the home.

Other basic items include: a change of clothes, raincoats, durable shoes, a blanket, plus non-perishable food items that do not need to be cooked. Don't forget the manual (non electric) can-opener. Flashlights and extra batteries are essentials, and a weather radio is helpful to keep you updated on what shelters are open and what roads to avoid.

Be sure to store important documents — such as birth certificates and insurance policies — along with cash and credit cards in a sealed waterproof container. And don't forget items such as prescription drugs or other frequently used items such as diapers and baby formula.

Preparing before the hurricane can save you a frantic trip to the already crowded and bare-shelved grocery store. As a Florida resident — part-time or otherwise — it pays to prepare.

Letters to The Editor

From the Editor: Our July/August issue brought a great deal of readers out of the woodwork, offering insight and asking for clarification on the cover story, "Are You Unknowingly Breaking the Law?" Caller Leo Travers, a retired trucker with 2.8 million miles of perfect driving, wanted to add a few tips. He said few people observe the law requiring headlights to be turned on 30 minutes after sun up and 30 minutes before sun down. He also suggested turning on headlights and flashers when entering a school zone. "Kids see headlights, and flashers catch their attention."

Read on for more...

Editor:

My apologies for invading your space but I did want to thank you for the article in the July/August edition of The Sheriff's Star by Corporal Rick Hord.

I appreciated his comments about license tag / frames.

I have a question about License plate frames.

I notice that most license plates that use frames are totally obscured with respect to information such as Issuing state, expiration date, etc. Given that every state offers multiple license plates one can not hope to know all the variations.

I am greatly disturbed that if I should see an automobile (or truck) in a situation requiring reporting a problem I am unlikely to know the state of the license.

Are there "street legal" requirements that address the problem of the license tags which hide information about the state of issue?

If not, I think it would be an appropriate item for the national association to address.
J.K.

Cpl. Hord replies:

The applicable statute is FS 316.605(1) which requires license tags to be properly mounted (not swinging), and clean and free of any obstructions.

Tom Berlinger, the Florida Sheriffs Association's Director of Law Enforcement and Jail Management Services, researched the issue and says the Florida law that governs licensing of vehicles and the proper display of a license tag is definitive, stating that you cannot obscure any information on the license tag.

It states that the tag must be "plainly visible and legible at all times 100 feet from the rear, and 'nothing shall be placed upon the face of a Florida plate except as permitted by law or by rule or regulation of a governmental agency.'"

Editor:

I read (the "Breaking the Law" article) with great interest being a former FHP officer. I have wondered what is going on with all these items I have been seeing on cars knowing they were illegal. I do not see any enforcement of them along with a very large item - tires outside of the body.

But as to why I am writing. The author did a good job in the article. However, there is one glaring error on page 15 regarding tag lights. In the center column he states incorrectly tag lights can only be RED, but in the right hand column states correctly they are to be white. Since I am sure most of your readers do not change the color of their tag lights it probably does not matter. I just thought you might want to know about it.

I do enjoy the magazine. Thanks for hearing me out.
F.D.

Cpl. Hord replies:

I've had other comments about (this issue). It was poor wording on my part. The light that illuminates the tag must be white. I confused the issue by mentioning that a light on the rear of a vehicle must be red. In that case, I was referring to a red neon light around the perimeter of a tag, which you do sometimes see. A WHITE light must still illuminate the tag - but the light around the tag must be 1) red and 2) not cause any glare that interferes with reading the tag, which almost all of these frames do.

It would have been far better for me to just tell people not to use any license tag frame that obscures part of the tag (some of them, for example, make it difficult or impossible to read the state on some tags), or that has any light on it at all, and that any frame must not interfere with the white light that is required by law to illuminate the tag. My apologies for some awkward and confusing wording. Thanks for the chance to set it straight.

Editor:

I enjoyed the article written by Cpl. Rick Hord...much good information was presented.

We have a law regarding the use of headlamps during periods of rain. It's unbelievable the number of people who either have no regard for this law or are unaware of it. During the rainy season, when the rain is particularly heavy, it becomes life threatening. Here in Collier County, during periods of heavy rain, I have observed as many as 30 percent of oncoming vehicles with no headlamps on. It is dangerous as well as unlawful. There is no excuse for creating such a safety hazard.

Perhaps in some future issue, an article concerning this practice could be written. There are many drivers in Florida who could benefit. Maybe drawing attention to this hazard could save some lives.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.
A.B.

Editor:

The "Unknowingly Breaking the Law" article was very informative. However, Cpl. Rick Hord left out a major issue on flashing lights: illegal use of the emergency flashers.

I have noticed that increasingly more and more drivers turn on the emergency flasher on the interstate when it starts to rain. This is an illegal use - the vehicle is neither inoperative nor stationary, and it is detrimental to all other drivers. Any flashing light is distracting and disorienting - exactly the reason why emergency vehicles use it. In heavy rain, particularly at night, the vision is already greatly diminished and then there are these (people) who selfishly make themselves more visible at the expense of those who follow the law. All other cars are now less visible - if visible at all, and the poor driver who drives directly behind ends up with eye fatigue and an increasingly poorer perception of the traffic.

Needless to say, those who feel that this is OK fail to understand what hell can be created if this habit gets out of hand, and should definitely have a chat with eye care specialists.

The Sheriff's Star is widely read and I feel it would be beneficial to elaborate on the article reminding us when and where not to use them. One might add that the habit of public transportation drivers turning on the emergency flasher when halting for passengers is also an illegal use.

In closing, it is imperative that the laws are understood by all as to their context/content. There is a difference between closing an eye, giving a warning instead of a ticket, etc., and allowing the public to "break the law," with the excuse of "no harm done."

FLORIDA SHERIFFS' ASSOCIATION LAW ENFORCEMENT MEMORIAL Dedication

The day was hot and humid, and the mood was somber.

Hundreds of family members of Sheriffs' Office employees killed in the line of duty gathered under the stately oak trees behind the Florida Sheriffs Association headquarters in Tallahassee on September 18. They came for the dedication ceremony of FSA's Law Enforcement Memorial and to pay their respects to those officers who made the "ultimate" sacrifice – laying one's life down for the safety of others.

As of the dedication, 263 names had been etched, representing all killed since 1844.

W. Stanley "Sandy" Proctor was the sculptor, and Mark Lillie was the architect and designer. The memorial concept and project coordinator was retired FSA Executive Director Buddy Phillips.

Virtually all of the 67 Sheriffs Offices were represented by uniformed officers or entire divisions. The traditional drum-and-pipe corps played Amazing Grace, there was the traditional riderless horse - including the boots positioned backwards, representative of a fallen officer, the playing of "Taps" - and a 21-gun salute.

Union County Sheriff's Office provided a special wreath to memorialize the most recent officer to fall, Deputy Renee Azure, who died in August.

The Florida Sheriffs Association thanks the nearly 11,000 individuals, families and businesses that made a donation to the Law Enforcement Memorial. You can take pride in this magnificent tribute, a memorial wall with statues positioned under the shady oak trees, that will continue to give for generations to come.

An Open Letter From Union County Sheriff Jerry Whitehead

To the Law Enforcement Community:

Please accept our thanks to all who responded so graciously to our call at the death of our deputy, Renee Azure. Your participation in the motorcade and your attendance at the funeral were wonderful reminders that the law enforcement family sticks together in times of tragedy.

It was impossible to get a complete accounting of all those that were involved. However, the Azure family shall always remember the massive sea of patrol cars, motorcycles, rescue units and fire trucks. The Azure's lives will forever be touched by the men and women in uniform who came to show their respect for their loved one.

Even in the midst of a trying time like this, we are encouraged to hold our heads high and take a bold stand. We are committed more now than ever to serve the people of our community and we have all of you to thank for that!

Sincerely,

Jerry Whitehead, Sheriff
Union County, Florida

Editor's note: Deputy Renee D. Azure of Union County was killed in a car crash on August 6, 2002, while responding to a burglary in progress. Her name appears as the most recent addition to the wall of the Florida Sheriffs Association Law Enforcement Memorial.

All New "Deputy B. Friendly" Robot

More than 14 years ago, the Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office Crime Prevention Unit purchased a high-tech robot to assist deputies in interacting with children in order to teach them skills to "Be Safe." The robot was appropriately named "Deputy B. Friendly," and he served the sheriff's office well until his retirement. He now volunteers his time by guarding the entrance to the Palm Beach Sheriff's Office vehicle maintenance office.

Sheriff Ed Bieluch decided it was time to bring a new deputy to town. Unfortunately, the new guy doesn't have a name.

He was introduced recently during the National Night Out celebrations and seemed to collect many adoring fans. It was such an

When he comes to visit, children are fascinated by "Deputy B. Friendly," the robot "deputy" that teaches personal safety skills designed especially for them.

In the meantime, members of Palm Beach County's Problem Oriented Policing Unit are training Deputy Robot for his new assignment. Soon he will be available to assist school resource officers and crime prevention deputies in promoting good safety habits and reminding children to listen and follow his crime prevention tips.

The robot will primarily target preschools and elementary schools in the county. For more information on the robot, or the contest, please contact the Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office POP Unit, (561) 688-4180.

Award-Winning Book On Florida Sheriffs 1821-1945

The Florida Historical Society has awarded the 2002 James J. Horgan Award for "Outstanding Books on Florida History," to co-authors William Warren Rogers, Ph.D., and James M. Denham, Ph.D., for penning the book, Florida Sheriffs: A History, 1821-1945.

In presenting the award, University of Central Florida's Jose Fernandez, Ph.D., chair of the selection committee, said, "Bill Rogers and Mike Denham have provided an important look at an important element of county politics in Florida. They have focused their attention on county Sheriffs who were important political figures in Florida and who also operated on the frontlines of law enforcement. This is a major contribution to understanding the political dynamics of early Florida."

The Deputy's Prayer

By: Kitty West and son, Seminole County Sheriff's Deputy S.C. McLeod

Lord, I come on bended knee
And ask that You forever be with me
I pinned this star upon my chest
With the vow to always do my best.

Lord, I pray for strength and wisdom,
Let me do whatever's right
Lord, take my hand and guide me
Through the day and through the night.

Lord, just stand beside me,
Let me pass the test
Let me bring peace and harmony
Where there is unrest.

May I never use my weapon in anger,
May I never take a life
Give me the courage and foresight
To put an end to strife.

But should the time come
That I have to make that call
Lord, please let the record show
I did it standing tall

I need to know You're with me,
I need to know You're there
I need to feel the touch of Your hand
I need to know You care.

Let your Spirit be with me
Let us be as one
And when my "star" is laid to rest
You'll say, "Job well done."
